A dispatch from Falmouth, Mass., dated July 5, to the Boston Globe, gives the foliciting account of a wedding of paramount interest to Kansas City society:

At noon to-day the marriage of Miss Laura Morse, daughter of Colonel and Mrs. C. F. Morse, of Kansas City, Mo. to Mr. Charles E. Brewer, occurred at St. Baranabas' Episcopal church.

The event was one of the most distinguished and interesting of the kind in the annals of this old town.

Both bride and groom enjoy a wide acquaintance and have wealth and social prominence. Mr. Brewer was a graduate of Harvard 36, and while in that university was closely identified with athletics, having been a member of the football eleven under Captain "Bob" Emmons.

Elegance and artistic beauty marked the floral decorations. White and plak roses were the only flowers used, and these were assed in profusion on the altar and grouped amid palms and ferns on either side hear the memorial candetabra.

The central aisle was an avenue of white bloom. The pews were tied with large duriters of plak and white roses; fastened with broad white satin sashes. The windows were banked at the base with palms. Rev. Mr. H. H. Smythe performed the ceremony.

tuous wedding breakfast was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Brewer left in the afternoon for an extended bridal trip, which will include a tour of Europe. Upon their return they will reside in Boston.

A charming method of enjoying the Fourth was afforded the younger set by the dancing party given Monday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Norton Thayer. The affair was in compliment to their daughter, Marian, and their cousin, Mr. Thomas McGrain, who has recently come from Chicago to live in Kansas City, and was thus happily introduced to Miss Marian Thayer's young friends. thus happily introduced to Miss Marian Thayer's young friends.

A large number of flags and quantities of flowers, red, white and blue, vied with each other in displaying the national colors in every part of the handsome Thayer residence on Warwick boulevard. Dancing was, of course, the principal amusement of the evening, and was supplemented by a brilliant display of fireworks and delicious refrashments served on the wide versade. refreshments served on the wide veranda.

The out-of-town guests were Mr. Preston

Mr. Sam Kelly, . . . A "patriotic breakfast" was the felicitous name under which Mrs. Charles E. Knox entertained guests Thursday morning last from 10 to 1 o'clock, to meet Mrs. Fred Wishart, of Springfield, Mo.

The hours were spent on the lawn, which was all aglow with the national colors, minhiure flags and streamers in festons combining with the velvet green of the turf to present a charming picture. A novel game interested the guests, in which missing sentences were to be supplied to patriotic songs. The printed slips were attached to the national colors draped about the grands, and the hunt for the bits of paper and missing sentences proved an amusing pastime.

Mrs. Fred Wishart scored the highest number of successes, and was awarded a beautiful enameled national flag. After this the guests gathered about a miniature liberty pole to which were attached red, white and blue streamers, and sang patriotic songs. A delicious breakfast followed. About 100 guests were in attendance.

The Squire's Bed.

From the Youth's Companion.

An old Highland chief, finding his youngest son, a mere boy, sleeping on the battlefield with a huge snowball under his head, kicked it away, exclaiming: "What do ye want wi' a pillow? I'll nae such efeeminacy in my family!" A similar aversion to "efeeminacy" marked Charles Waterton, an English squire, who in early life had wandered through many lands as a naturalist intent on making collections of birds, reptiles, insects and wild tions of birds, reptiles, insects and wild beasts.

The bedroom where the squire slept, and also prepared the specimens in his natural history collection, was in the roof, and open to the rafters. Across a stretched rope was thrown a striped blanket and his working clothes. The furniture was rough, coarse and scanty—an old deal table, three crazy chairs, a deal clothes press and a chest of drawers. The floor, deal boards, was uncarpeted.

Mrs. Byrne, who narrates the incident in her volume, "Social Hours With Celebboards, was uncarpeted.

Mrs. Byrne, who narrates the incident in her volume, "Social Hours With Celebrities," on surveying it, remarked on the anomaly of a bedroom lacking a bed.

"I've long learned that a bed is a useless luxury," said the squire, drawing from a corner an oblong block of oak, two feet long, ten inches wide, eight inches deep, hollowed and polished in the middle. Then he pulled down the sirrjeed blanket, rolled it around him and lay down on the bare boards, resting his head on the block.

"There, that's my bed! It's soon made, and I'll answer for it none of you sleep more soundly than I."

For thirty years the block and blanket had been the squire's bed, summer and winter, in health and sickness. When traveling, as he could not carry about his timber pillow, he used the best substitute he could devise. Once he was Mrs. Byrne's guest in London, and, as usual, retired to rest at 9 o'clock. The German maid, not supposing that he had retired at so early an hour, went into the bedroom to take in the can of hot water. She gave a scream and rushed out. The next morning her mistress asked for an explanation.

"Ach, vell may you ask! I vent into de room, and vat did I see? A long body roll up in a blanket on de floor, and cray head on a portmanteau."

A curious story is told in the British war office. Some years ago a workman was engaged in casting metal for the manufacture of ordnance at the Woolwich arsenal, when he lost his balance and fell into a huge caldron containing twelve tons of molten steel. The metal was at white heat, and, of course, the unfortunate man was utterly consumed in an instant. The war department authorities held a conference, and decided not to profane the dead by using the steel in the manufacture of ordnance, and the enormous mass of metal was actually interred, and a Church of England clergyman read the burial service over it.

THE FORMAL ADDRESS.

Did Not Matter Much to These Two People but "My Mamie" Suited Well.

rom the Chicago Poet.
"I never have been able to get it through my head," she said as the lights burned low, "which is the more formal in begin-low, "which is the more formal in beginning a letter—'dear' or 'my dear.' Ot course, I mean preceding a name."

"It depends upon circumstances to a large extent," he replied.
"But 'dear' is unquestionably a term of endearment," she protested.
"And yet," he asserted, "its absence may make an endearing phrase—a love message, if you will—doubly significant."
"I fall to see how," she returned, blushing prettily merely because of the course the conversation was taking. "I should say rather that it became the more significant as one approached the superlative degree."

"In a measure it does," he admitted; "but much depends upon the circumstances and the persons involved. If an old gentleman writing to you addresses you as 'Dear Miss Brown,' that is distinctly formal, while if he says, 'My Dear Miss Brown,' it seems a trille patronizing and fatherly, and to that extent is more friendly. But if a young man uses 'Dear' and 'My Dear' the conditions seem to be reversed."

"I don't see how."

"Then let me illustrate," he said, "Suppose I should address you as 'My Dear Girl. That would seem rather patronizing, would it not, as if I were about to point out some little error or bit of foolishness? But if I should say, 'Dear Girl,' how about that? Does it not mean more than the other in my case?"

"While you was should!" she suggested. "In a measure it does," he admitted; "but that? Does it not mean more than the other in my.case?"

"While you are about it," she suggested, again blushing, "why might you not say, "Dearest Girl?"

"The superlatives are used so much by some Americans," he said, "that they lose much of their force and often do not seem to have the strength found in lesser degrees. As love terms, 'Dear Heart' and 'Sweetheart' have stood the test of years, and any attempt to put them in the susweetheart have stood the test of years, and any attempt to put them in the superlative, as 'Dearest Heart' and 'Sweetest Heart,' instead of being more effective would be simply farcical and would detract from, rather than add to, their significance."

"But how about withdrawing the word 'dear' entirely?" she asked for being a

'dear' entirely?" she asked, for, being a woman, it was only natural that she should wish to make a study of the intricacies of these terms. "You spoke of that, you know."

"Certainly," he answered, "and I can "Certainly," he answered, "and I can prove the truth of what I said. Again let me illustrate with you. I say to you, "My Dear Mamie." It may mean much: it may mean little. It depends upon circumstances. It may seem patronizing, or it may not. That also depends upon circumstances and the tone. But we take away the word 'dear,' and then I say to you, 'My Mamie.' What do you say to that?"

"Why, I—I guess I am," she replied, blushing a deeper red than before, "but you might have found out whether I was or not without adopting such a roundabout method."

Nevertheless, having proved his case and

"Never. Durn that hoop, but it don't want to go on!"
"I must ask you to get this business over as soon as possible," continued the lawyer, as the old man kept at his work.
"But it's going to rain."
"Yes, but here's your money."
"And I've got to get this har'l fixed."
"It won't take over ten minutes to fix up our business. Run along and fetch your wife."

"See here," said Uncle Jerry, as he laid "See here," said Uncle Jerry, as he laid down his hammer and wiped the back of his neck. "Mariar has gone over to Blodgett's to be gone an hour. Before she went she said I must tinker up this rain barrel."
"But, can't you stop your tinkering to handle $10,000 in cold cash!" exclaimed the lawyer in indignant tones.
"Yes, yes, I kin stop work; but what about Mariar?"
"Well, what about her?"

"Yes, yes, I kin stop work; but what about Mariar?"

"Well, what about her?"

"Why, she'd come home expectin' this bar'l to be all tinkered up, and if she found it wasn't, them $10,000 wouldn't hold her no more'n a tow string would hold a hoss. She'd just shove me clean down among the cabbages, and jump on the bar'l with both feet and squash it all to squash, and fur the next week I'd hev to walk on tiptoe and eat my meals in the woodshed."

A REPRESENTATIVE PIRATE.

Captain Kidd Was Utterly Without Any Sense of Honor-Was No Hero.

"The Buccaneers and Pirates of Our Coast," Mr. Frank R. Stockton's series of narrative sketches, is brought to a close in July St. Nicholas. Mr. Stockton says of one of the most widely known of all pi rates:

It is said that Kidd showed no repentance when he was tried, but insisted that he was the victim of malicious persons who swore falsely against him. And yet a more thoroughly dishonest rascal never sailed under the black flag. In the guise of an accredited officer of the government, he committed the crimes he was sent out to suppress; he deceived his men; he robbed and misused his fellow countrymen and his friends, and he even descended to the meanness of cheating and despolling the natives of West India islands with whom he traded. These people were in the habit of supplying pirates with food and other rough customers entirely honest and willing to pay for what they received, for as the pirates made a practice of stopping at certain points for supplies, they wished, of course, to be on good terms with those who furnished them. But Kidd had no ideas of honor toward people of high or low degree. He would trade with the natives as if he intended to treat them fairly and pay for all he got, but when the time came for him to depart and he was ready to weigh anchor, he would seize upon all the commodities he could lay his hands on, and without paying a copper to the distressed and indignant Indians he would gaily sail away, his black flag flaunting deristvely in the wind.

But although in reality Captain Kidd was no hero, he has been known for a century and more as the great American pirate, and his name has been representative of piracy ver since. Years after he had been hung, when people heard that a vessel with a black flag—or one which looked black in the distance—flying from its rigging had been seen, they forgot that the famous pirate was dead, and imagined that Captain Kidd was risiting their part of the coast in order that he might find a good place to bury some treasure which it was no longer safe for him to carry about. It is said that Kidd showed no repentance when he was tried, but insisted that he

"I Ain't Yo' Auntie."

From the New York Sun.

A young girl from the far South, who was making her first visit to Washington, was on the street alone, trying to find the house of a friend. Just then she met a middle-aged, very respectable-looking colored woman, well dressed, but carrying a hasket of clothes. The sight cheered her; colored people were always so kind to her down home, and she hurried to the woman and said, most sweetly: "Oh, auntie, I have lost my way. Won't you please tell me how to get to k street?" Instead of the expected "Yans, indeed, chile." the colored woman glared at her, and said, in rasping tones, as she stalked haughtily away: "I ain't yo' auntie—I'se yo' ekal."

OUR SPANISH GUESTS

INCLE SAM KEEPS A PEW AT FORT M'PHERSON.

They Play Bull Fighting-A Dozen Spanish Prisoners Who Are Quiet, Well Behaved Men, but They

Object to Heing Gayed.

At Fort McPherson, Atlanta, Ga., are a doozen Spaniards, who are our enforced guests. Their presence there is not of special importance, as events in war go, but the men themselves and their life as our first prisoners of war are not without interest. On the day on which they ar-rived the prisoners were confined in the reservation guardhouse—a regulation army jail—and surrounded by such restrictions as left them no doubt that they were prisohers. In fact, so repugnant was this treatment to the Spaniards that, through their ranking officer, Colonel Cortijo, Wey-ler's brother-in-law, they entered a vigorous complaint. Colonel Cortijo alleged that such a thing as closely confining prisoners of wir was an unheard-of breach of inter-national custom, and that the men shoulhave been paroled and given the freedo of the grounds.

Finally, a time came when the prisone who had not attended religious servi for some weeks, felt the need of spirit of the most unique occurrences of the prisoners' stay. Father Bazin, a prominer Roman Catholic priest of Atlanta, was summoned by a telegram from the war desummoned by a telegram from the war department to service at the barracks. But a difficulty arose. Not one of the prisoners understood English or Latin, and it began to look as though the audience would be compelled to listen to the sermon without understanding it, when Coionel Cortijo finally evolved an ingenious plan. He discovered that the priest was an excellent French linguist, and as he is himself familiar with that tongue, the matter was simplified. The priest delivered the sermon in French, and as he proceeded Colonel Cortijo translated it into Spanish for the benefit of his companions. This practice was continued during the colonel's stay at the post, and after his departure other officers took his place.

his place. Preserving Caste.

One of the noteworthy actions of the Spaniards is the tendency to preserve caste between themselves, even though all are bushing a deeper red than before, "but you might have found out whether I was or not without adopting such a roundabout method."

Nevertheless, having proved his case and accomplished his purpose, he proceeded to take possession.

TOO BUSY TO TAKE MONEY.

Ten Thousand Dollar Fortune Nothing Compared With a Wife's Tongue Lashing.

From the Washington Star.

A lawyer had come all the way from California to pay a $10,000 legacy over to Uncle Jerry Hopefield, who had lived all his life in a little town in Ohio, and after breakfast two or three of us were invited to go along and witness the transfer. When we reached the house Uncle Jerry was tightening up the hoops on the rain barrel, while his wife had gone to see a sick neighbor. They had been fully identified the day before as the proper parties, and now the lawyer said:

"Well, Uncle Jerry, I want to hand you that money and get a receipt and be off this morning."

"Tm kinder busy, just now," said the old man, as he stopped hammering for a moment.

"Yes, but I have $10,000 here for you. I don't believe there's a man in the world who wouldn't stop work long enough to sign a receipt for such a fortune."

"You come over in about an hour?"

"Look here, man, but did you ever see $1,000 in all your like of the such as a see the personners and privates or cupied the such as a see and privates or cupied to the surreless of the prisoners. On arrival at the imprisoned on equal terms. Under Colonel Cortijo's regime, the non-commissioned of-

Wanted a Whole Fork.

Wanted a Whole Fork.

On returning to their barracks the prisoners proceed about the regular amusements of the day. One of the principal pastimes is mimic builtights. So intensely devoted to the national game are the Spaniards that even far from home, and with no prospect of seeing it again very soon, they descend to child's pilty to recall, as well as possible, the memories of happy Cuba. The twelve men divide their ranks into horses, riders and buils. The buils are chosen for their agility and the horses for strength. The matadors are supposed to be the most skillful swordsmen in the party. At a given signal the horses and their riders wabble out into the center of an imaginary arena, and after cavorting around and exhibiting various tricks of agility and strength, are suddenly and viciously attacked by the buils. The combatants circle nearer and nearer, and finally comes the grand clash. Everything is then lost sight of amid a commingling of arms and legs and long coats. In several instances so herce had been the onsets that blood was left on the floor when the dramatic personnae separated.

The men are treated with every consideration consistent with military rigor. They have no prescribed duties, even the cleaning of their quarters, being attended to by post servants, and are free to spend their time as they will between meals. They are permitted to write and mail letters, although they must first be supervised by one of the fort officials. Nearly all of them have a greater or less amount of money, and they are allowed considerable latitude in its expenditure. They are all inverterate cigarette smokers, and most of their cash goes for the little white weeds. Individually the prisoners give no trouble. They are all mild-mannered and submissive and treat their guards and the officers with the utmost courtesy. As raid before, their officers are as much the cbjects of homage behind a prison wall as
